

Digital Dzonga helps with switch

*“WE LEARN as we go along.”
That is how Minister of Communications Sphiwe Nyanda sees the process of changing South Africa’s broadcasting from analogue to digital – the Digital Dzonga. A forum which will accelerate South Africa to the digital switch-over in 2011 was launched in Joburg yesterday by Nyanda. This migration is necessary because it will give more people cheaper access to the Internet – something that is very important for schools in rural areas. – SAPA*
